management. "The business is on a solid footing, and the discussions with employees and the management team have been open and focused on finding a solution. The priority now is to develop a future outlook and lay the groundwork for a successful restructuring," said Mr Peter Roeger, who will be supported in the proceedings by attorney Ms Jacqueline Tilberis and business lawyer Mr Maximilian Wanko.

The company has had to file for insolvency on account of a liquidity shortage caused by declining orders and sales in the difficult market environment. A structured M&A process will now be conducted with a view to finding suitable investors or partners and developing a long-term solution for the company.

Management also feels optimistic, despite the current challenges: "The company has pursued a growth strategy and made investments in recent years, but the general conditions have worsened significantly in the meantime and the order volume is low. We have therefore had to respond and file for insolvency. We see this as an opportunity to stabilise the company and reposition it for the future. With the insolvency administrator's support, we want to preserve our business."
